Excerpt from History of the Rise, Progress, and Present State of Banking, in All Parts of the World: In Which Is Developed an Entirely New Principle of Circulating Medium, for the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland III. Cap. 49. Was resolved upon, and in the course of the enquiry on the 31st of March, 1819, the bank exhibited the following account of the state of their affairs, viz. that the whole of the claims upon them on that date amounted to of which was notes in circulation, and in deposits and other debts, against which their assets in cash and bullion, bills discounted, and government securities, amounted to leaving a balance in favor of the bank to the amount of exclusive of the permanent debt of the government, as exhibited in sect. And added in Flattering as all this may seem on a superficial view of the subject, and confident as Opinion generally was, of the country having escaped the peril, so earnestly warned of by Lord Lansdowne, in sect. 51, a short period only elapsed before the effects of the system, spectre-like, returned in a more terrific form than ever. Preparatory to the return to cash payments in 1823, through the years 1821 and 1822, the bank had progressively diminished the issue of its notes from an average of in December, 1820, to an average of 16,393,000 in December, 1822; a depression in the money value of all the products of industry, without any parallel since the commencement of the war in 1793, followed this diminution of circulating medium. But the ordeal of the experiment of paying gold on demand having...
