A Year Out of Time is the story of one twelve year old girl from a nice middle-class background and a nice private school (where her mother hoped she might learn to be a lady) who, in the Autumn of 1940, finds herself pitched into the totally foreign environment of a small Worcestershire hamlet. For the space of one year her life revolves around the village school and its manic headmaster; the friends she makes, notably Georgie Little the bad influence ; the twee but useful fellow evacuees, Mavis and Mickey Harper, whose possession of an old pigsty proves the springboard to some surprising and sometimes hilarious happenings; and Mrs Arris, the vast and formidable landlady of The Green Dragon Inn. In the company of Georgie Little she awakens to the joys of a new and exhilarating world: a secret world which excludes most adults and frequently verges on the lawless. The year comes to an explosive end and she returns unwillingly to her former life. But the joyous, anarchic influence of the Forest and Georgie remains, and sixty years on is remembered with gratitude and love. E.M. Phillips is alive and well and living in Hampshire. She never did become a lady.
